

of a design to minor changes in the geometry, which will inevitably occur during manufacture, the quality of a design is based both on the level of vibration isolation and its standard deviation. This ensures that the design performs well.